2014 Political Interns – Los Angeles

May-May Chen

University of Chicago

Intern at Office of California State Controller John Chiang

Tsai-Wei Chen (May-May) will be a second-year Economics major at the University of Chicago next fall. Though originally from Taipei, Taiwan, she spent most of her childhood living abroad in Swaziland, St. Kitts, and Belize. This summer, May-May is very excited to learn more about politics, eat her first In-N-Out Burger, and take touristy photos all around LA. When she isn't baking (and eating) cakes and cookies at home, May-May likes to spend her time performing outdoor activities, such as camping, kayaking, jogging, and mountain climbing. She also enjoys reading novels, watching TED Talk videos, exploring cities, and eating lots and lots of ice cream.

Andy Su

University of Southern California

Intern at Office of California State Assemblymember Holly Mitchell

Andy Su is a New York transplant in Los Angeles currently a student at the University of Southern California, studying Astronautical Engineering. He recently realized his Taiwanese American identity and has gotten involved with the community as the Assistant Philanthropy Director for the Intercollegiate Taiwanese American Students Association (ITASA) National Board. He is also an active leader in the broader Asian American community as the President of the Student Coalition of Asian Pacific Empowerment (SCAPE) and volunteers with local civil rights groups in Los Angeles. Next year, he will be serving on USC's Undergraduate Student Government as the Assistant Director of Diversity Affairs and is excited to put the skills learned in his TACL internship to use.

Kevin Campbell

Tufts University

Intern at Office of California State Senator Kevin deLeon

Born in southern Arizona, Kevin has spent much of his life as a resident of Massachusetts, growing up in Taunton and attending college at Tufts University in Medford. He studied Biochemistry and served as President of both the Taiwanese Association of Students at Tufts and Tufts University Radical Breakdance Organization. In his free time, Kevin enjoys exploring, basketball, and dance. Kevin will be attending dental school this fall in Boston and is looking forward to spending the summer as a TACL Political Internship Program Intern in Los Angeles, his first time living on the West Coast.
